DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

1. The request for a continued prosecution application (CPA) under 37 CFR 1.53(d) filed on [1] is acknowledged. 37 CFR 1.53(d)(1) was amended to provide that the CPA must be for a design patent and the prior application of the CPA must be a design application that is complete as defined by 37 CFR 1.51(b). See Elimination of Continued Prosecution Application Practice as to Utility and Plant Patent Applications, final rule, 68 Fed. Reg. 32376 (May 30, 2003), 1271 Off. Gaz. Pat. Office 143 (June 24, 2003). Since a CPA of this application is not permitted under 37 CFR 1.53(d)(1), the improper request for a CPA is being treated as a request for continued examination of this application under 37 CFR 1.114.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claim 7 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kertzman ('201) in view of Norlien et al. ('500) and Jackson ('796).

Kertzman discloses method of drying or humidifying a substantial volume of gases comprising the steps of: forming a thin-walled permeable membrane tubing (18) by blown film extrusion (col.4, lines 30-34); supporting said tubing by an outer protective mesh support (24); sealing connectors (31) to each end of said tubing.

The differences between Kertzman and claim 7 are breathing gas as gas samples which are dried, supporting said tubing by an inner protective mesh support and connecting the supported tubing in a patient breathing line.

Norlien et al. teach drying of breathing gas samples for the purpose of eliminating water vapor (moisture) from the samples thereby providing a dry sample to an analyzer (col.2, lines 43-68) and connecting the permeable membrane tubing in a patient breathing line (21,22).

It would have been obvious to modify the fluid drying tube of Kertzman to employ it to dry samples of breathing gas because it would have provided a means for eliminating water vapor (moisture) from the samples and provided a dry sample to an analyzer thereby providing a more accurate analysis of a breathing gas sample as taught by Norlien et al..

Jackson (col.4, lines 38-50) teaches supporting an thin-walled permeable membrane tubing (18) by inner (52) and outer (50) protective mesh supports for the purpose of rigidifying and reinforcing the membrane tubing in the event that the respirator is operated improperly so that pressure in the tube (18) becomes excessive and ruptures the tube (18).

It would have been obvious to modify the thin-walled permeable membrane tubing of Kertzman to include an inner protective mesh support because it would have provided a means for rigidifying and reinforcing the membrane tubing in the event that the respirator is operated improperly so that pressure in the tube becomes excessive and ruptures the tube as taught by Jackson.
